TASTING: FLIGHTS AND BOARDS

Tastings start with a single shot each of three different tequilas, which are served on a tasting board with a refillable caballito (a two-shot cordial glass) of sangrita, which is a mildly spicy non-alcoholic palate cleanser made of tomato juice, orange juice, and chile piquin. There is also an empty caballito on the board, which is held in reserve for the finish: when you have completed the tasting, we fill the empty caballito for you with whichever of the tequilas you tried ends up being your favorite. (The finish is already included in the price of any tasting.)

FLIGHTS: A way to sample differently aged tequilas (or differently produced mezcals) from a single source (thus the Gran Centenario flight contains Plata, Reposado, and Añejo).

BOARDS: A way to sample tequilas from different makers that have the same aging designation (for instance, a Silver board might include Don Eduardo, Frida Kahlo, and Patron).

The Sauza Flight is an answer to the question: “Why the hell would I want a tasting?” It contrasts three Sauza creations: Sauza Blanco, Conmemorativo Añejo, and Tres Generaciones Reposado. You’ll be able to taste the differences. It’s a fine place to start.

Silver	29
Reposado	34
Añejo	39

OPEN BOARDS

You may also construct a board from any three tequilas or mezcals on the menu. If you’re unsure, ask the bartender to help you come up with something interesting.
